From the Chair

As faculty members in a successful graduate program we know it! Our students know it! Our alum’s know it!

Now the Bangor Daily News finally heard this important message from our incoming USM President, Harvey Kesselman, “the key to boosting USM enrollment may be transfer, and grad students!”

The doom-and-gloom story at USM is primarily a story of steady decline of undergraduate enrollments. We know there is a counter-narrative but for some reason it has taken a new USM leader to articulate the important role of graduate education.

Dr. Kesselman also summarized the importance of graduate students in the BDN article (May 3, 2015), “This is a critical population for a school that — with campuses in the state’s two largest cities — needs to establish itself as a go-to spot for working professionals seeking postgraduate credentials for career advancement.”

The School of Education and Human Development has the largest enrollment of graduate students at USM and it could grow, if given vital support from the USM leadership. That is the message - graduate programs are healthy and could be the little engine that drives USM back to be the positive and productive campus we all know it can be.

Leadership Projects

Each student is expected, in consultation with their mentoring administrator, to identify an educational issue of importance to the school/district that needs time and attention to be addressed. The critical factor in the selection of the topic is that it must be of importance to the mentor while providing the student with an optimum learning experience. Most of the projects are conducted over a one year time period with many extending longer.

This year’s leadership projects were exceptional and are listed below. If you would like more information about any of the projects you may contact the student directly or contact me and I will forward your request.
Jody Capelluti (jodyc@usm.maine.edu).
