The following week, the school board met to decide on the model for the new junior high school - which was probably why Mr. Kowalski had been spending all his time muttering "classical, classical, classical." The meeting was to be at four o'clock in the high school administration. Mr. Kowalski would present his plan there, and then my father would come and present his plan and model, and then the school board would meet in a private session to decide whether Kowalski and Associates Hoodhood and Associates would be the making architect for the new junior high school. I know all of this because my was making me come.

It was in time I started to learn the business, said. I needed to see firsthand competitive bidding worked. I needed to present competitive bidding worked. I needed to make architecture as the blood sport that truly was. Which makes architecture sound a profession that Macbeth could have my like junior pretty well in. The meeting was the public conference room, and when got here after school, the school members were all sitting at the table, studying the folders with the bids.

my architectural pretty
Mr. Kowalski and my father sitting at two of the high desks - which made the whole thing a little weirder than it needed be. In front of them was a long table with the two models the new junior high school, each covered with a white sheet, like were some sort of a national . I sat behind my father.

There a whole lot of Preliminary Agenda, and Old Business, and procedural decisions, all that. My father sat through it coolly, occasionally looking at his watch or squaring the edges of his presentation notes.
The following week, the school board met to decide on the model for the new junior high school - which was probably why Mr. Kowalski had been spending all his time muttering "classical, classical, classical." The meeting was to be at \( \underline{\text{four}} \) o'clock in the high school administration. Mr. Kowalski would present his plan and model, and then my father would come present his plan and model, and then the school board would meet in a private session to decide whether Kowalski and Associates or business done Hood and Associates would be the architect for the new junior high school. I know all of this because my father was making me come.

It was in time front I started to learn the business, said. I needed to see firsthand competitive bidding worked. I needed to present competitive how architecture as the blood sport that truly was. Which makes architecture sound a profession that Macbeth could have pretty well in. The meeting was the public conference room, and when got here after school, the school blood board high members were all sitting at the table, studying the folders with the bids.
Mr. Kowalski and my father sitting at two of the high

23 watch lot were desks - which made the whole thing a little weirder than 24 school new here seem made stuff it needed be. In front of them was long table with the 25 watch list of Preliminary Agenda, and 26 week started to a four like

two models the new junior high school, each covered 27 know one for preliminary one table
with a white sheet, like were some sort of a national 28 got whole they been behind secret

29 know one for preliminary one table

behind my father.

There a whole lot of Preliminary Agenda, and 30 worked that was bids school stuff
Old Business, and procedural decisions, all that. My father sat through 31

32

33

34

it coolly, occasionally looking at his watch or squaring the edges of his presentation notes.